CONSERVING FOR THE FUTURE

THE CHALLENGE

How can we protect our coastal heritage from the effects of climate change?

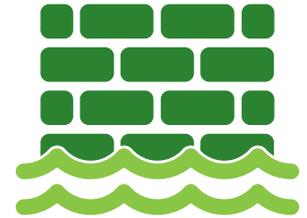

Coastal erosion puts our cultural treasures and important archaeology, like the 18th-century burial grounds at the Fortress of Louisbourg, at risk.

THE RESULT?

New knowledge has provided a backbone for flood protection projects like the quay wall and the two stone groynes at Barrier Beach.

A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION

Routine shoreline monitoring and partnered initiatives help scientists protect valuable cultural resources.

GET INVOLVED NOW IT'S YOUR TURN

SWIM WITH SALMON

Join Parks Canada biologists as they track the population of endangered inner Bay of Fundy Atlantic Salmon by conducting snorkel surveys. This unique, day-long, backcountry expedition involves a training session and snorkelling alongside park biologists to help monitor endangered Atlantic salmon.

THE PAST BOOMS

Signal Hill National Historic Site is a sight to behold, but getting to experience it as a soldier of the Royal Newfoundland Companies in 1862 takes it to the next level. Firing a musket over the majestic St. John's Narrows while wearing a historic uniform—that's Signal Hill at its best.

DANCING STARS

My favourite things to do in Kouchibouguac National Park are paddle boarding in the shallow lagoon pools, watching the sun bathe the white sandy dunes when it sets, and seeing the stars dance in the reflection of the water at night. At this Dark-Sky Preserve, you get a spectacular celestial show at the end of your epic day. It's a very humbling experience.

HEMLOCKS AND HARDWOODS TRAIL

The looming beauty of this trail will never lose its magic for me. Every time I visit Kejimikujik National Park and National Historic Site, I always make sure to carve out time to do this special trail. Over the years I keep coming back and every time my fondness for the giant, shady trees grows even deeper.

BELL'S INSPIRING VIEW

Sitting in the red chairs on the roof top terrace, looking at the beautiful Bras d'Or Lake, and imagining Alexander Graham Bell enjoying the same view, being inspired but at the same time, finding his spirit soothed and calmed by the beauty and serenity, allowing his mind to be open to creativity and new ideas.

MICA HILL TRAIL

This trail takes you through all three forest types showcased in Cape Breton Highlands National Park, past a beautiful lake to 360° of panoramic views. The mica for which the destination is named glitters on the ground around you while quartz boulders glow white amid a riot of spring blooms or fall foliage.
